Four finalists to become Idaho State University's next president will visit Idaho throughout the month of January meeting with faculty, students, alumni and community leaders.

"Having the finalists in Idaho is the next step in our presidential search. It's a great opportunity for the public to personally meet the finalists and learn more about each one. In return, the finalists get to meet the Idaho State University community and share their thoughts on the future of the University," said Karen McGee, State Board of Education member and head of the ISU Presidential Search Advisory Committee.
