The evidence is clear....the most important factor in student achievement is teacher quality. So having a teacher evaluation system that improves professional practice is critical. This comprehensive course will help teachers and administrators gain a clear understanding of an effective evaluation process through the use of online video and activities. Designed and hosted by teacher evaluation expert, Charlotte Danielson, this course includes guided and independent practice opportunities. Every teacher and administrator will benefit by learning the importance of evidence collection and the central importance of teacher reflection in the evaluation process. Participants will gain strategies for gathering evidence, determining levels of performance and engaging teachers in meaningful conversations about teaching. Through classroom examples and video of pre conferences, classroom lessons and post conferences, every teacher and administrator will gain a thorough understanding of the complete evaluation cycle. Providing consistent training in teacher evaluation is first step in building inter-rater reliability.

In addition, participants will also be challenged to examine their own assessment literacy by self-assessing their dispositions, knowledge and performance as defined by the Assessment Literacy Standards published by the Michigan Assessment Consortium
